ABOUT

Hi, I'm the travelling snail!

Well, if you've found this blog, it must be because you are desperately trying to find information about your next trip.

Cool! I will help you answer all those questions about the arrangements: how to plan your routes, your destinations, accommodation, transport, delicious food and the expenses. All that taking into account your preferences, your time and, obviously, your budget. You will also get some tips on how to save money and make the most of your travelling experience.

But let me tell you about me first! I am a travel addict and my adventure started when I first set off to Australia at the age of 26. There I lived wide-eyed with amazement for three years. But not everything was a bed of roses! Once back in Spain, Madrid offered me the best professional experience I could ever imagine. I worked as a tour operator organizing safaris around South and East Africa (Zimbabwe, Botswana). Then, destiny wanted me to return to my hometown, Majorca, where I started my degree in English Studies.

It was thanks to so many superb outings that my desire to encourage people to travel and make their dreams come true began to take shape. That's precisely what I'm doing now through this modest blog.

So if you feel the compelling need to discover new places and cultures, share interesting experiences, taste unusual flavours and be soaked with other aromas as you travel inexpensively without putting your dreams aside, then you are a potential travelling snail.

Why 'a travelling snail'? Basically because a snail is a cute animal which carries its house on its back, it finds shelter when it is scared, it moves forward slowly and tenaciously and it needs only a few things to be happy.

Have you got a backpack and a passion for adventure? Be a travelling snail like me!
